Abstract

This workshop aims to present the current view and trends of blended learning research. There is a growing trend of publications on blended learning. Therefore, there is a need to have a comprehensive review of the subject in order to apply the results of previous research in your teaching, and to carry out further research. Collaboration patterns, current research topics and citation hotspots in blended learning will be introduced and discussed. The software CiteSpace will be used to analyze the bibliographic data. This workshop provides you the hands on experience of the tool. Participants will have a chance to discuss pedagogic applications and research opportunities.
